

Fairness and Equalities Impact Assessments

The purpose of an EIA is to improve service delivery and/or the experience of employees by making sure that it does not discriminate, intentionally or unintentionally and where possible promotes equality. EIA's can help identify direct and indirect discrimination and institutional discrimination

EIAs are a route to ensuring individuals and team members think carefully about the impact of the work on service users and staff to take appropriate action to improve services. By fully integrating impact assessments into the service planning process equality and diversity will be mainstreamed.

EIAs also help to anticipate and identify the consequences of projects and work streams and services and help ensure that as far as is possible any negative consequences are eliminated or minimised.

The EIA form has recently been revised to take account of wider potential impact on fairness, and will be known as Fairness and Equalities Impact Assessments.
